

Student Spotlight Page: Tina Chang

Tina Chang is the inaugural Assistant Provost of Community and Executive Education at UMass Boston, bringing with her a wealth of experience and a dynamic vision for expanding the university's footprint through noncredit learning initiatives. With a career spanning roles at prestigious institutions such as the University of Washington, UCLA, and the University of New Orleans, Tina has honed her expertise in developing impactful programs that meet the needs of diverse communities.

In her new role, Tina sees tremendous opportunities to create noncredit programs that not only provide valuable learning experiences but also contribute to the growth and prosperity of individuals in their respective fields. By partnering with our colleges as well as a myriad of business and community organizations, Tina aims to reach new demographics and provide adult learners with continuous learning opportunities throughout their careers and lifetimes. This includes offering digital credentials that students can showcase on platforms like LinkedIn, enhancing their professional profiles and opening doors to new opportunities.

Collaborating closely with the learning design team, marketing team, and various colleges within the university, Tina is taking an intentional approach to identify the noncredit courses that will add the most value across the institution. Drawing from her background as a faculty member teaching educational leadership, law, and special education courses, her experiences working with K-12 public and private schools, Tina brings a unique perspective to community and executive education, ensuring that programs are tailored to meet the diverse needs of learners.

Along with nearly 20 years of professional experience in the field of education, Tina's academic journey from studying human resources development as an undergrad to earning graduate and professional degrees in educational leadership and law, have equipped her with a versatile skill set and a deep understanding of the educational landscape. Her advice to students is to seize every opportunity for growth and advancement, leveraging their unique strengths and interests to chart their own paths to success, and to build a strong professional network to contribute towards and draw from throughout one's lifetime.

In summary, Tina Chang's leadership as the Assistant Provost of Community and Executive Education embodies a commitment to innovation, collaboration, and student success. Through her strategic vision and dedication to meeting the evolving needs of learners, Tina is poised to make a significant impact at UMass Boston and beyond.
